Legislative Session Nears Close

EUROPEAN SITUATION PRESENTS LESS SERIOUS ASPECT

Yesterday's Proceedings at the House of Assembly

The Work of the Session Virtually Completed — The West India Service Referred to Select Committee.— Disappointment Expressed Over Personnel of Railway Commission.

With yesterday's sitting, the work of the present session of the Legislature was virtually closed up. Pending the furnishing of certain information in relation to the sum required to wind up the Militia Department and to provide for payments already made returned men in the form of bonus evening up their pay with the Canadians, this vote in Supplemental Supply was held over until today.

MR. HIGGINS presented a petition from Freshwater, Bell Island, asking for a small allocation to complete a landing place for fishermen in that locality. The petition was endorsed by Mr. Fox and Mr. Vinnicombe. The House went into Committee on Supply, when the remaining votes Agriculture and Mines were agreed to.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER announced that he had decided, as already stated to cut out the Model offer.

THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION strongly objected to paying bonuses to Civil Servants, and particularly did he object to payment for extra services being made to the Auditor General and members of his staff. The extra amounts for the police force was in his opinion entirely unnecessary. $18,500 for Labrador police. The Inspector General read something in the papers that there was something doing on Labrador, so he sent down a force of police. Now, they are coming back. Ten new constables for a prohibition country. There are far too many policemen in this country. People thought that when the Prohibition Act was passed the police force would be reduced. It is by far greater than ever before. This new force for Labrador, even if they were on their way home would not be discharged. It was admitted and he spoke from full knowledge as a practising lawyer, there were never so many petty larcenies in the country as now.

Mr. Moore, (Ferryland) further objected to Mr. Davey's position as Government Inspector of Works. The Leader of the Opposition raised the technical point, whether Civil Servants, such as he claimed Mr. Davey and Dr. Mosdell to be, could hold seats in the Upper House. He noted that Mr. Alex Mews recently resigned when he was appointed to the Audit Dept., and continued that both gentlemen referred to should do the same thing.

Mr. Woodford following along the lines of the speech delivered by him on Wednesday, contended that the Woodfordites in Mr. Main District were being discriminated against, and charged the Hon. Mr. Hawco with having an eye single to political expediency when giving out work to Mr. Main folk. The ex-Minister of Public Works became very wrathful and threatened to take up quarters in mensa et thora in the Assembly Chamber, unless he was given the assurance that work for the unemployed would be distributed in his district on the 50-50 basis. Sir Michael Cashin criticised the various votes in supplemental supply. Mr. Moore objected to the importation of plasters to work on the Normal School. Sir Michael Cashin was told by the Prime Minister, that the position of labor agent for the Government at the Humber was only a temporary appointment, and no vote had been taken to provide a salary.

The Leader of the Opposition hoped to see the Normal School, if not by this administration, then by a succeeding one, turned into what is more useful public utility, a hospital. He was in no sense a Normal School man. This country cannot afford it, much

New Government May Be Means Of Finding Way Out

Germany's New Chancellor Is Said To Be Seeking To Get In Touch With Poincare

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—If Dr. Gustav Stresemann, the new Chancellor, is actually seeking to get in touch with the French Premier, M. Poincare, he will very likely find an encouraging atmosphere for informal parleys awaiting him in the opinion of political leaders here. These leaders assert that the path to the French Premier is already made tolerably passable for Dr. Stresemann, through signaling back and forth between groups of French and German unofficial personages, who nevertheless are not without authority or prestige.

It is taken for granted in Reichstag circles that the German Industrialists, far from discouraging the new Chancellor from embarking on such an enterprise, would not hesitate to make use of their influence with French industrialists and financial leaders with the purpose of actively furthering any attempt which aims to seek a dignified way out of the Ruhr impasse.

For Germany there has been a marked change for the better in the character of news brought in from Paris by Berlin newspapers during the past forty-eight hours, and instantaneous psychological effect of this on the popular mind has been to stimulate the belief in an early rift in the black Ruhr clouds. That the new government is eminently better situated to effect a solution of the Ruhr embroglio which would not carry humiliation and political defeat with it, than was Chancellor Cuno's ministry, is now taken for granted, if only for the reason that Cuno by making an outspoken patriotic issue of the Ruhr situation, gradually became ensnared in a hopelessly deadlocked position from which he was unable to disentangle himself without prejudicing Germany's case.

Less an expert to lay out the grounds. He could show where the country lost thousands of dollars in not accepting the lowest tenders for work.

Mr. Sullivan discussed several matters of importance. He contended after the revelations of the past month that the Audit Act should be amended. If not the Auditor General should be held to strict accountability of the acts of the Government for the current year. Not only police had to be supplied but they had to be dressed in different uniform. Now they were coming back to scrap their uniforms. The Normal School being turned into a hospital he heartily endorsed. There was a crying need for more hospital accommodation as the outport people could not be admitted.

Mr. Vinnicombe made a speech referring to the liquor situation.

In reply to a question by Mr. Higgins, if the Government contemplated the appointment of a Deputy Liquor Controller. Hon. the Prime Minister said, no, the matter had never been considered by the Government.

The final vote in supply then passed.

1111. The House went into Committee on Ways and Means.

The Insurance Tax was made one and a half per cent instead of one per cent to liquidate the loan for the purchase of fire trucks, etc. The tax to be continued until the loan of $30,000 with interest is liquidated.

The Prime Minister introduced resolutions which call for a loan of $3,500,000. The items of expenditure are made up as follows:

Temporary Loan Bank of Montreal . . . $ 855,426.78
Deficit June 20, 1923 . . . 850,000.00
Loss on Pit Props, Relief, Seed potatoes, etc. . . 1,000,000.00
Estimated Loss on Railway Operations . . . 400,000.00
Due Bank of Montreal for Expenses of Militia Department . . . 114,573.23
Expenses in connection with Soldiers' Graves, Roads, and Public Improvements . . . 240,000.00
Total . . . $3,500,000.00

The Prime Minister stated the Government had appointed the Railway Commission to look after the Arrest of De Valera May Mean Republican Victory

DUBLIN, Aug. 16.—It is pointed out here that the Free State Government can intern DeValera, captured yesterday at Ennls, for six months, or try him before a civil tribunal, but indications at present are that the former alternative will be adopted, and that he will be interned with Austin Stack and his associates.

One of the first effects of the arrest has been a large increase in the number of Republican candidates to be nominated Saturday for the Dail Eireann.

The Sinn Fein director of elections announced to-day that fifty candidates selected may be increased to one hundred or more, as messages from constituencies were urging such a course.

The Republicans think their chances immensely improved by the dramatic arrest of their leader.

In dependents and neutral groups also there is hope to gain, they believe the ordinary voter wants peace, and will look for members who have not been associated with either side in the activities of the past year.

No Censure Is Passed On Marvelle Commander

Loss of Ship Was Cited With Grave Error of Judgment, in Court Finding.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The court of enquiry into the loss of the Canadian Pacific Steamship Marvelle off Newfoundland, May 21st, found the casualty and loss of the vessel due to "grave error in judgement" on the part of the captain, through being over-confident in the position of the vessel. No censure, however, was passed on the Captain.

KINDRED OF THE DUST

(By PETER P. KYNE)

CHAPTER VII.

"I hope you sent that shameless Brent girl away, too," she announced, with the calm attitude of one whose own virtue is above reproach.

Donald glared at her. "Of course I did not!" he retorted. "How thoroughly unkind and uncharitable of you, Jane, to hope I would be guilty of such a cruel and unmanly action!"

The Laird waved his carving knife. "Hear, hear!" he chuckled. "Spoken like a man, my son. Jane, my dear, if I were you, I wouldn't press this matter further. It's a delicate subject."

"I'm sure I do not see why Jane should not be free to express her opinion, Hector, that the Brent girl is quite outside the pale of respectable society."

"We shall never agree on what constitutes 'respectable society,' Nellie," The Laird answered whimsically. "There are a few in that Seattle set of yours I find it hard to include in that category."

"Oh, they're quite respectable, father," Donald protested. "Indeed they are, Donald! Hector, you amaze me," Mrs. McKaye chided. "They have too much money to be anything else," Donald added, and winked at his father.

"Tush, tush, lad!" the old man murmured. "We shall get nowhere with such arguments. The world has been at that line of conversation for two thousand years, and the issue is still in doubt. Nellie, will you have a piece of the well-done?"

"You and father are never done joining forces against me," Mrs. McKaye protested, and in her voice was the well-known note that presaged tears should she be opposed further. The Laird, all too familiar with this truly feminine type of tyranny, indicated to his son, by a lightning wink, that he desired the conversation diverted into other channels, whereupon Donald favored his mother with a disarming smile.

"I'm going to make a real start to-tomorrow," he announced brightly. "I'm going up in the woods and be a lumberjack for a month. Going to grow warts on my hands and chew tobacco and develop into a brawny rough-neck."

"Is that quite necessary?" Elizabeth queried, with a slight elevation of her eyebrows. "I understood you were going to manage the business."

"I am—after I've learned it thoroughly, Lizzie."

"Don't call me 'Lizzie,'" she warned irritably.

"Very well, Elizabeth."

"In simple justice to those people from Darrow that you evicted from the Sawdust Pile, Don, you should finish your work before you go. If they were not fit to inhabit the Sawdust Pile, neither is Nan Brent. You have got to play fair." Jane had returned to the attack.

"Look here, Jane," her brother answered seriously. "I wish you'd forget Nan Brent. She's an old and very dear friend of mine, and I do not like to hear my friends slandered."

"Oh, indeed!" Jane considered this humorous, and indulged herself in a cynical laugh.

"Friend of his?" Elizabeth, who was regarded in her set as a wit, a reputation acquired by reason of the fact that she possessed a certain knack for adopting slang humorously (for there was no originality to her alleged wit), now bent her head and looked at her brother incredulously. "My word! That's a rich dish."

"Why Donald, dear," his mother cried reproachfully, "surely you are jesting!"

"Not at all. Nan Brent isn't a bad girl, even if she is the mother of a child born out of wedlock. She stays at home and minds her own business."

and lets others mind theirs."

"Donald's going to be tragic. See if he isn't," Elizabeth declared. "Come now, old dear; if Nan Brent isn't a bad woman, just what is your idea of what constitutes badness in a woman? It would be interesting to know your point of view."

"Nan Brent was young, unsophisticated, poor, and trusting when she met this fellow, whoever he may be. He wooed her, and she loved him—or thought she did, which amounts to the same thing until one discovers the difference between thinking and feeling. At first, she thought she was married to him. Later, she discovered she was not—and then it was too late."

"It wouldn't have been too late with some—er—good people," The Laird remarked meaningly.

"In other words," Donald went on. "Nan Brent found herself out on the end of a limb, and then the world proceeded to saw off the limb. It is true that she is the mother of an illegitimate child, but if that child was not—at least in so far as its mother is concerned—conceived in sin, I say it isn't illegitimate, and that its mother is not a bad woman."

"Granted—if it's true; but how do you know it to be true?" Jane demanded. She had a feeling that she was about to get the better of her brother in this argument.

"I do not know it to be true, Jane."

"Voula!"

"But—I believe it to be true, Jane."

"Why?"

"Because Nan told her father it was true, and old Caleb told me when I was at his house this morning. So I believe it. And I knew Nan Brent when she was a young girl, and she was sweet and lovely and virtuous. I talked with her this morning, and found no reason to change my previous estimate of her. I could only feel for her a profound pity."

"Pity is akin to love," Elizabeth quoted gaily. "Mother, keep an eye on your little son. He'll be going in for settlement work at Port Agnew the first thing we know."

"Hust, Elizabeth!" her mother cried sharply. She was highly scandalized at such levity. The Laird saluted and peppered his food and said nothing. "Your attitude is very manly and sweet, dear," Mrs. McKaye continued, turning to her son, for her woman's intuition warned her that, if the discussion waxed warmer, The Laird would take a hand in it, and her side would go down to inglorious defeat, their arguments flattened by the weight of Scriptural quotations. She had a feeling that old Hector was preparing to remind them of Mary Magdalen and the scene in the temple. "I would much rather hear you speak a good word for that unfortunate girl than have you condemn her."

"A moment ago," her son reminded her, with some asperity, for he was sorely provoked, you were demanding the right of free speech for Jane, in order that she might condemn her. Mother, I fear me you're not quite consistent."

"We will not discuss it further, dearie. It is not a matter of such importance that we should differ to the point of becoming acrimonious. Besides, it's a queer topic for dinner-table conversation."

"So say we all of us," Elizabeth struck in jaconically. "Dad, will you please help me to some of the well-done?"

"Subjects," old Hector struck in, "which, twenty years ago, only the family doctor was supposed to be familiar with or permitted to discuss, are now being agitated in women's clubs, books, papers, and the public schools. You can't smother sin or the facts of life unless they occur separately. In the case of Nan Brent they have developed coincidentally; so we find it hard to regard her as normal and human."

"Do you condone her offense, Hector?" Mrs. McKaye demanded incredulously.

"I am a firm believer in the sacredness of marriage. I cannot conceive of a civilization worth while without it," The Laird declared earnestly. "Nevertheless, while I know naught of Nan Brent's case, except that which is founded on hearsay evidence, I can condone her offence because I can understand it. She might have developed into a far worse girl than it appears from Donald's account she is. At least, Nellie, she bore her child and cherishes it, and, under the rules of society as we play it, that required a kind of courage in which a great many girls are

A Quick Relief for Headache
A headache is a common ailment, and one which is often caused by indigestion, overwork, and other causes. It is a relief which is often sought by the use of medicine, but which is often followed by a worse headache. A quick relief for headache is found in the use of the following remedy: Take one or two drops of the following mixture in a glass of water, and it will give you a quick relief from your headache. The mixture is made of the following ingredients: One ounce of water, one drop of oil of peppermint, one drop of oil of eucalyptus, and one drop of oil of rosemary. Mix well and use as directed.

deficient. Give her credit for that." "Apparently she has been frank," Elizabeth answered him coolly. "On the other hand, father McKaye, her so-called courage may have been ignorance, or apathy or cowardice or indifference. It all depends on her point of view."

"I disagree with mother that it is not a matter of importance," Donald persisted. "It is a matter of supreme importance to me that my mother and sisters should not feel more charity toward an unfortunate member of their sex; and I happen to know that it is a matter of terrible importance to Nan Brent that in Port Agnew people regard her as unclean and look at her askance. And because that vacillating old Daney did not have the courage to fly in the face of Port Agnew's rotten opinion, he subjected Nan Brent and her helpless old father to the daily and nightly association of depraved people. If he should dare to say one word against—"

"Oh, it wasn't because Andrew was afraid of public opinion, lad," Hector McKaye interrupted him dryly. "Have you no power of deduction? 'Twas his guild wife that stayed his hand, and well I know it."

"I dare say, dad," Donald laughed. "Yes; I suppose I'll have to forgive him."

"She'll be up to-morrow, my dear, to discuss the matter with you," The Laird continued, turning to his wife. "I know her well. Beware of expressing an opinion to her." And he bent upon all the women of his household a smouldering glance.

Apparently, by mutual consent, the subject was dropped forthwith. Donald's silence throughout the remainder of the meal was portentous, however, and Mrs. McKaye and her daughters were relieved when the meal finished at last, they could retire with good grace and leave father and son to their cigars.

"Doesn't it beat hell?" Donald burst forth suddenly, apropos to nothing.

OBITUARY

Editor Evening Advocate.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly allow me space in your much read paper to record a few brief remarks concerning the deaths that occurred at Ladle Cove during the short period of seven months, from December, 1922, to July 1923.

During the said time I served as teacher there, and thus after being among these kind people, learning of their ways, bearing with them their burdens, it is not now without sentiments of sorrow and regret that I make these brief remarks.

The first that God was to take from our midst was two dear children (my bright loving pupils) in the persons of Ivy and Harold Welton, aged 11 and 6 years, respectively. Although, so young and beautiful, that disease, diphtheria, caught hold of them, and although all that could be done by loving hands was done to restore them to health, yet the result was death. Although it was so hard to the parents to lose their loving children, yet they learned to understand that the Lord, who giveth, has a sovereign right to take away, and that God's ways are always best.

The next that was to go was an aged gentleman, in the person of Abner Stratten. He had lived to a ripe old age, and left to mourn his sad loss many children and grandchildren, and a large number of relatives and friends. Great were the stories he could tell when talking of his life. The sorrowing ones have the consolation to know that "Even down to old age God can follow us", and that "When hoary hairs shall their temples adorn, like lambs they shall still in His bosom be borne."

The next that was to be called to loss of their dear ones I extend my greatest and deepest sympathy, and of, perhaps, about a year old. She was the beloved child of Mrs Adelaide Abbott. The said Mrs. Abbott had lost her dear husband some time previously, but God who does all things well, also saw fit to call to His arms her dear baby. "Suffer little children to come unto me."

The next who was to be called up yonder was a young gentleman of 21 years, in the person of Corb West. The deceased was said to have contracted that dread disease consumption. He went to St. John's in the Autumn of 1922, seeking thereby all means to regain health, but God had ordered it otherwise, and in the month of May, 1923, he was brought home a corpse. Although it was so striking to his relatives and friends, yet "they sorrow not, as they who do have no hope." For some time before he had taken ill-health he had consecrated his life to the service of God, and during his whole life he was always found as a devoted member of the Sunday School. "Our earthly loss is heavenly gained."

The next who was to depart life was the saddest of all. It was a young gentleman of perhaps about 30 years, in the person of John Lewis Wellon. It was a most striking occurrence when the message was received that he, together with two other men were drowned at Aspen Brook. They were going for their day's work and the boat in which they were was leaky, and capsized. It brings to our mind more closely "In the midst of life we are in death." Although it was so hard to know of the poor men who had lost their lives thus, yet we must also be thankful to God that He had spared two other men and a boy who had been in the same boat at that time. He leaves to mourn his sad loss a loving father, one sister and three brothers.

When thinking of these deaths that occurred during such a short period of time, we are compelled to say as the poet, W. F. Lloyd, "My times are in Thy hands; my life, my friends, my soul I leave entirely in Thy care." Here we have instances of children, youths and aged persons dying. It behoves us to hope to consideration that life is uncertain, that our time is surely coming and we know not when.

To all those who are mourning the loss of their dear ones I extend my greatest and deepest sympathy, and pray that the great God who has promised that He will lay no more on us than we are able to bear, will ever with them in the time of trouble.

ALMA ATTWOOD.

Boyd's Cove.

July 19, 1923.

To The Editor, The Advocate,
Dear Sir:—Please allow us space in your esteemed paper, the Advocate, to record the death of our dear brother, Alfred John LeDrew, who passed peacefully away on June 19th.

All that loving hands could do was done for him, but all in vain. He was taken home, where there is no parting and no sorrow. We trust and hope some day we will meet our dear brother.

He leaves to mourn father, mother three brothers and one sister and a large number of friends.

He was buried in the Church of England cemetery. The service was conducted by lay reader, Hubert Lewis.

Inserted by his brother and sister.

Editor Evening Advocate.

Dear Sir,—Will you please publish in your much read paper, the Advocate, a few items concerning our recent "tea and dance" in the C. of E. school, Middle Brook, in honour of our dear old teacher, Mr. George Chant, who is leaving us to-day. Mr. Chant came here about five years ago, teaching school. "He was a stranger who had come unto us and we took him in." Since that time he has made many friends and no foes. He is a man who was liked by all. We believe Mr. Chant felt the blow of departure keenly from so many kind friends. We believe he enjoyed himself well with us. We know Mrs. Chant did not enjoy herself so well as she had been sick nearly all the time, but it seems she is improving now. The dance was kept up till dawn, when Mr. and Mrs. Chant wended their way home. The blow was felt by all when Mr. and Mrs. Chant started to shake hands with men, women and children. A large number of small children was there to bid adieu to their good old teacher, Mr. Chant. Mr. Chant also did his duty in the Church as lay reader. Mrs. Chant was formerly Miss Domicity of Greer-pond. She is returning back to her native home. We trust she will enjoy good health. We wish Mr. and Mrs. Chant and daughter a long and happy life. I wish to say Mr. Chant was over 30 years teaching school. Mr. and Mrs. Chant have said good-bye to the people who loved them unto the end.

West India Service Bill Referred to Select Committee

At last night's session, Prime Minister Warren moved that the West India Service Bill be referred to a Select Committee with power to sit out of session and report when the House next meets.

The committee consists of Sir W. F. Coaker, Mr. Cave, Capt. Randell, Mr. Higgins and Mr. P. J. Cashin.

Despite the News' statement this morning, the case of the wish being father of the thought, the West India Service Bill is not finished, and in all probability it will materialize at next session, when the Select Committee, who will have had an opportunity to investigate thoroughly into the matter, will report to the Assembly. Coming as it did on the end of a summer session, and being generally misunderstood, it will be just as well that a full knowledge of the possibilities of the service may be acquired during the next few months. The short period intervening before the House again meets will not make any appreciable difference, and it is preferred that the House discuss the matter with a fuller understanding than to debate it under the present conditions.

We understand considerable opposition to the service comes from Water Street exporters. This fact, however, is no criterion of the advantages or disadvantages of the service. If some of these displayed as much interest in the general welfare of Newfoundland as in matters affecting their own personal interests, the fishermen all over the country, would not be face to face with a shipping season that will again see rushed cargoes, glutted markets and sacrifice prices.

The conviction is becoming established that if anything has to be accomplished for the country's advancement, it must be done in the face of the protests of Water Street exporters, contorted to a semblance of public opinion.

The Case of the Fishermen

The time passes.

From all over the country comes the news that the fishing season has spent itself. Fishermen believe the most has now been done. Windy weather and the fall season will soon keep the boats to their collars and close the fishing season.

And men's minds are turning more directly to the few quintals which they have procured since early spring.

In those few quintals, many of them see their winter's livelihood, large or small as the case may be.

The value to the fishermen depends upon the price per quintal they will get; and the price per quintal will depend upon what the exporters will do.

But, the time passes. Already it is almost too late, even if exporters showed a willingness to shake of their deadly inertia. No such willingness is apparent. The fishermen's case is allowed to shift for itself, and the exporters are employing their old-time methods to get ahead of their competitors in the rush to market.

Advocate's Suggestion

Acted Upon

In the report of the Municipal Council weekly meeting, it will be seen that the Council have decided to make some very necessary repairs to Long's Hill, Freshwater Road, Prescott and Cochrane Streets.

The condition of the above streets has long since needed repairs, and the public will be glad to hear of the Council's decision to deal with a matter, which, as the Advocate recently pointed out, was getting worse and worse.

FRANK COMMENT ON RUHR

LONDON, July 24 (AP)—London has heard some frank comment recently on the situation in the Ruhr. J. Thomas, the Labor leader, said recently at Shrewsbury: "It appears we are at the parting of the ways in European affairs, so far as France is concerned. No one wants to excuse Germany for her misdeeds, but we should say to France that the only solution of the present state of affairs is to get together, talk things over frankly, and watch the future with a desire to forget the past. We cannot stand by and allow the continuance of a policy which is ruinous to France as well as to Germany, and can but lead to disaster for ourselves."

President Sleeps In Quiet God's Acre of His Home Town

A Restful Spot, Sweet Smelling From Myriads of Flowers Piled Thickly Around—Military Pomp Banned—Widow Says Farewell at Graveside—Closing Scene All Very Simple.

(Special Despatch to The Toronto Globe)

MARION, O., Aug. 16.—The body of Warren G. Harding, twenty-ninth President of the United States, rests tonight in Marion Cemetery. Near the brown-stone receiving vault, where the metal casket containing his still form was placed this afternoon, are the mounds which cover the bodies of his mother and sister. Round about are the graves of many with whom he was on terms of intimacy in Marion's pleasant community life. A quiet and restful spot, this God's acre of Warren Harding's home town, sweet smelling from myriads of flowers piled thickly around his temporary tomb, a spot suggestive of all that God's acre should be.

Tonight, while silent soldiers of the army guard his body, the widow of the President is on her way back to Washington to oversee the removal of many personal possessions of her husband and herself accumulated during their residence of more than two years in the White House.

Mrs. Harding Bids Farewell
All that could be done was done by Mrs. Harding to deprive her husband's requiem of every and any appearance of pomp and ostentation. She resisted the efforts of those who would make this pleasant, tree-shaded, home-like little city the scene of a great ceremonial. With that decision for which she is noted among her friends, and to which she has tenaciously adhered by a supreme exercise of will since the sudden passing of her husband eight days ago, she courteously but firmly vetoed the suggestions of some of those in authority in Washington to surround the obsequies with military display and the paraphernalia of official spectacle.

No troops were in that simple procession which followed the body of the late President to the tomb save that little band of soldiers, sailors and marines which had guarded the metal casket in its travels across the continent to Washington, and from Washington to Marion. No uniformed or ununiformed organization had a place in that line. There were many of national distinction in the funeral cortege—the President of the United States; the Chief Justice, himself once a President; Senators, Generals and Admirals, the great and near-great, and the would-be great—but the trappings of officialdom were conspicuously absent.

The Soldier's Farewell.
In only one thing did the widow conform to the tradition and custom which have surrounded the final rites for a President of the United States. Under the Constitution he was the Commander-in-Chief of the army and the navy, commissioned by the suffrages of the people through their chosen electors to be the generalissimo of an armed citizenry in war as well as their guide and leader in the ways of peace. So while the procession to the tomb was in progress, guns boomed a parting salute, and as the final words were said a bugler sounded "Taps," its mournful notes echoing through the valleys round about. It was the soldier's farewell.

As the khaki-clad bugler stood in the doorway of the tomb and sounded his mournful farewell, leaning on the arm of her husband's devoted friend and secretary, the widow of Warren Harding passed through the door to say her own word of parting.

Widow's Display of Courage.
She was there but a minute, and when she stepped out again into the sunlight, it was with the dignity of a Queen. Traces of suffering could be discerned on the countenance behind that black veil. But her shoulders were erect, her eyes looked neither to the right nor left. She saw nothing of the President of the United States or those scores of men of note clustered around and about the resting-place of her husband.

Down the gravelled roadway, clear of spectators, she went with a firm step that gave majesty to her progress. Leaning only slightly on Mr. Christian's arm, flanked on one side by her husband's intimate, Gen. Charles E. Sawyer, his and her personal physician, and on the other by Major Baldinger, a Marion boy, personal aide to the late President, she moved the distance of 50 yards or so to where her car was waiting. Those who watched her will never forget that display of courage.

Closing Scene Very Simple.

"I will not break down," she had said over and over again in her assertion of will during that depressing journey from the Pacific Coast to Washington. She may have been saying it to-day as she walked from the place where she had left the man who was everything to her, and of whose achievements she was proud. To those who looked on she showed no signs of breaking. Hers was a private grief not to be shown to the multitude.

It was all very simple, the closing scene. The tens of thousands who stood along Marion's streets in the glare of the sun to watch the passing of the funeral procession—many or most of them strangers who had come to witness an historic spectacle that had none of spectacle in it—made it clear by their presence in such vast throngs that this was no ordinary funeral. Soldiers of the Ohio National Guard lined the way, performing the duties of civilian police, but beyond this evidence there was nothing to give to the last rites of a President of the United States the appearance that they were in memory of one so distinguished in the affairs of a great country.

In the house of the late President's father in East Centre street, where the casket lay since it was brought from Washington yesterday, simple prayers were said shortly before 5 o'clock this afternoon. The funeral procession formed and moved on when the heavy casket was placed in the grey motor hearse which carried it yesterday from the railroad station.

No Band of Music.
There was no band of music to give cadence to the mournful peace of that procession. It passed along East Centre street from the residence of Dr. Harding to State street, and out Delaware avenue to the cemetery. Great crowds lined the way before the head of the procession appeared the lawns of the pretty houses in Centre and State streets and in Delaware avenue were crowded with people, who made themselves at ease on the grass. Many others sat waiting on the spacious porches which are a striking and attractive feature of Marion homes. Along the edges of the sidewalk were many thousands more, shaded from the heat of the afternoon sun by the overhanging branches of the great trees which make Marion in summertime a bower of beauty.

Situation In Germany Is Improved

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—The labor and food situation in greater Berlin, today showed improvement over the previous days. This was due to the calling off of the general strike by the Communists.

Attempts of the Reds to paralyze the city proved to be a fiasco, owing to the opposition of the regular labor unions.

The currency shortage continues.

ON FOOLISH MATCHES

If a man does not make
A FOOL of himself,
There is always a WOMAN
Who will do it FOR HIM—
This is why
Nobody is surprised
If a CLEVER man marries
A FOOLISH woman
(Foolish being, in America,
"DUMB").
But if a WOMAN
Makes a foolish match,
Everybody is AMAZED,
For women are NOT expected
To make fools of THEMSELVES.
Idiot are SUPPOSED to fall

For Youth and Beauty;
Women are NOT supposed
To fall at all;
They are intended
To CAUSE the slip.
Then, if the man is worth it,
Pick up the pieces.
And treat them so tenderly
That the poor "TUMBLER" begs
To be led to the nearest altar
To be stuck together
For LIFE.
And the poor "LEMON" never suspects
That his little "orange blossom"
Was—a BANANA SKIN!

THE WORLD'S PRESS

Child Welfare.

(Philadelphia Ledger.)

Child welfare is a many-sided subject, revolving on a single pivotal point—the good of the child. Usually it is the good of the poor child. The best that the welfare workers may hope to do is to help that child to clean, healthy, honest manhood or womanhood. That, to be sure, is a tremendous best; and most institutions and most welfare agencies are bound to fall short of it. But it is a mark to be shot at; and the more shafts that can be made to hit the butt, whether or not they cleave the bullseye, the better for the community.

Reform in Egypt.

(Egyptian Mail.)

It is useless to expect the Egyptian woman to play an important part in public life when not one per cent of Egyptian womanhood can read and write; the precise figure is somewhere about seven in every thousand. Therefore, the first and most important stage in the program recently enunciated by Madame Sharawi Pasha is education and that means that there is spade-work to be done over many years before the Egyptian woman is likely to be able to make out her claim to vote and to stand for Parliament.

A Bible of Civilization.

(Le Canada.)

If we are concerned over the exodus from our rural districts, it is none the less a problem in many countries, in few of which indeed is it altogether absent. It has become a serious question in France, and an economist of that country deplores the fact that one should call that epoch one of progress which the number of citizens increases, while country people are more and more eager to leave their fields. To abandon the soil hardly seems to us a sign of progress, since, with the decrease of agricultural production life becomes more and more difficult.

Britain's Problem.

(Daily Chronicle.)

The support of our large population upon our small island area, with many handicaps both of soil and of climate, is anyhow a tough proposition. Possibly there is room for more than shame in our record of grappling with it. Yet so long as millions live below a decent subsistence is subject to continual uncertainty, room for shame remains.

Wilson's Idealism.

(Louisville Courier-Journal.)

No system could exist in which both capital and labor were not actuated by self-interest. The best that can be hoped is that the self-interest on both sides shall be an enlightened self-interest, premeated by the spirit of justice, generosity and humanity. Mr. Wilson's "The Road Away From Revolution" is the vision of a lofty-minded, warm-hearted idealist, confined too much in his study.

Eric Geddes Sees Dismal Future For British Trade

LONDON, July 24 (AP)—"I put the settlement of the European situation first and foremost of all measures which can be taken for the improvement of trade and the reduction of unemployment in this country," said Sir Eric Geddes, former cabinet minister and economic authority, addressing the Bradford Branch of the Federation of British Industries the other day.

"The general upward trend of trade," continued the speaker, "is checked because of the disturbed condition of Europe, and while I have fair reason to hope for an upward trend in the cycle of trade, I can at present see nothing but blackness when I look for a resumption of the upward progression in the general level of trade shown during the last century."

"Our unemployment is caused by the state of Europe. The working, trading, and banking community of the country cannot too insistently bring before the government the conviction that the great problems of this country would melt as mist before the sun if a stabilized condition could be brought about in Europe."

"Not only can Germany not purchase from us, but Italy prefers to purchase from Germany because German cost of production is much lower owing to her depreciated currency. And it does not stop there. India cannot purchase from us because Germany cannot purchase India's products, and so throughout the world."

As proof that England still lagged behind America in the efficiency of her factory operatives, Sir Eric said that while English hands did no more work than they did some years ago, in America there had been an all-round improvement of fifteen percent in the efficiency of factory workers.

The royal family of Japan is engaged just now, you will be interested to hear, in the study of the subject of Socialism. A number of members of that family are busily reading books on Socialism. For instance the Prince Regent is studying such a book, while Prince Chichibu, second son of the Emperor, is attending a course of lectures on the development of Communism from the time of the French Revolution.

A desire to keep abreast of the times in political thought—this is said to be the cause of their interest in Socialism. "We do not propose to study a dangerous Socialism which is subversive of the welfare of the State," explained one of the authorities of the royal family, "but we intend to study and understand the healthy economic phases of State Socialism and to foster healthy thought which is fitting to the present age."

The son of the Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Prime Minister of Great Britain, is a Socialist. The world's five greatest living writers are Socialists: Anatol France, Gerhardt Hauptmann, H. G. Wells, G. Bernard Shaw and Maxim Gorky.

A great hospital for disabled Negro veterans has been erected by the American government at Tuskegee, in the State of Alabama. It was decided to fill the many posts of doctors, nurses, etc., with colored people.

Immediately there was a great howl from the Ku Klux Klan and other bigots in the Southern States against the plan to give these posts to Negroes. They should be given to white people, it is claimed.

This would be amusing if it were not disgusting and revolting. In no Southern hospital is a Negro doctor or nurse employed. Indeed, no colored doctor or nurse is permitted to treat or attend to a white person in those States.

And yet the whites want the posts of doctor, nurse, etc., in this hospital which is to be used exclusively by Negroes! It shows to what lengths of ridiculousness greed can carry men.

There is much good sense in these words, spoken by Henry James Forman, an American writer:

"The test of a nation is in what it most values. There was a time when success in business or on the Stock Exchange constituted greatness in this country. We are, however, in process of shifting. When our standard of value is completely changed and we as a nation, put the highest value upon intellect, then great thinkers and writers will arise in this land to an extent yet undreamed of."

"Let the heroes in public schools for a generation be great thinkers, writers and spiritual leaders, rather than generals and merchants, and the attitude of our nation will be material altered."

"Extol the man who never could compromise with prejudice who dared to face and speak the truth, however unpopular. He surely is the type of hero to put before the youth of the nation."

A very remarkable thing was done by doctors in an American hospital some time ago. In the New Haven Hospital a woman was suffering from a severe abdominal hemorrhage from which patients rarely recover. Quick work was required. The blood expert was summoned, the blood was drawn from the abdominal cavity, the wounded vessels tied, and the blood almost immediately filtered and re-injected into the dying woman's veins. The effect was almost instantaneous and the woman recovered. In this and other cases handled on the same day the citrate method is used, the citrate being added to the blood to prevent coagulation.

It is things like this that cause me to want to take off my hat whenever I see a representative of Science. Can we ever estimate the debt humanity owes its Scientists?

Official Spanker For San Francisco-Chinese

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 14 (AP)—"Spanking neatly done" might be the sign on the door of the headquarters of the Chinatown squad at the Hall of Justice here. Police Corporal Jack Floyd is the official spanker, and rarely a day passes that he does not imprint his trademark on some incorrigible Chinese youth.

Corporal Floyd, who, because of the fierce aspect he assumes on punitive occasions, is also known as the "Mandarin of Chinatown," first entered his present profession about three months ago when a worried Oriental parent confided to him:

"My boy, Sam, he no like go school. All-time run away. Take him juv'nile court—no good. No like juv'nile court. Sam jus' run away some more. You spanke him, Mistah Floyd." And Floyd did.

So appreciative was the parent of Floyd's handwork that he presented him with a canary bird in a picturesque cage. Today a dozen canary birds at the Hall of Justice testify that Floyd's business is expanding.

July 19th, 1923

Editor, The Evening Advocate,
Dear Sir,—Will you permit me space to record the death of Hettie, darling child of Archibald and Martha Moore, aged eleven years, who died at St. John's on June 29th, where her mother had taken her for medical treatment. She being a member of the Methodist Sunday School, a large number of children followed her to the grave, each wearing a white knot of ribbon and dropping it on the coffin bidding farewell to their dear little companion until the Resurrection Morn, when they hope to meet again. To know Hettie was to love her; such a dear bright girl. Being the Supt., I often went to see her and shall miss her sweet voice joining so heartily in the singing.

She leaves to mourn her, father and mother, two sisters, three brothers and lots of friends. They also wish to thank all the kind friends who helped them in many ways in their bereavement and for writing dear Hettie in his illness.

Though cast down, yet not forgotten; Though afflicted, not alone; Thou didst gove, and thou hast taken, Blessed Lord, thy will be done.

Passengers Tell Story of Stranding of S.S. Sable I.

From the passengers of the stranded steamer Sable I, who reached the city by special train last night, it was learned that the ship left Sydney Saturday evening last for St. Pierre where she arrived on Monday. Here some passengers and 1200 cases of liquor were landed and the ship resumed her voyage to this port at 7.10 p.m.

A heavy gale was blowing at the time, with rain, and the ship could make only seven knots. Everything went well till 9.22 p.m., or little over two hours after leaving the French port, when the ship struck what is believed to have been a submerged wreck or, some other obstruction.

When the steamer struck she shivered from stem to stern, but did not hold, as she went straight on, which gives rise to the belief that it was not a rock that caused the accident. The chief officer was on the bridge at the time, and Capt. Murley was in the engineer's room. Immediately the accident occurred, he took charge, and as the steamer began to leak badly in the forward compartment, Capt. Murley ordered the boats lowered.

The discipline was excellent, and there was no panic of any kind, all the crew and passengers taking up their respective stations, and in quick time the boats were ready in case those on board would be forced to abandon the ship.

The pumps were set going but failed to stop the flow of water which kept gaining, and as the steamer was going down by the head, Captain Murley decided that the only thing to be done was to betch the ship, and, looking up his chart, he selected what he believed was a suitable spot, and within forty-five minutes the Sable I. was safely beached, and according to those in the vicinity, Captain Murley did better than if he had had a pilot on board.

The ship went in over a reef and is lying on the inside with fourteen feet of water under her stern, and her forward hold full of water. Some forty-five head of cattle were in the after hold, and in less than half an hour after the steamer struck, the water was up to their legs. After the beaching the pumps became choked owing to feed and other cargo getting into them.

On Monday night all the passengers and crew slept on board, as there was no immediate danger, and it was Tuesday afternoon that the passengers went ashore, the Sable being then high and dry on the beach. On Tuesday morning, the cattle were landed in slings and are now on Lamaline Island where they are being cared for.

The passengers were received most hospitably by the people of the place who did everything possible for them until they joined the Argyle for Argentina.

All speak in glowing terms of Capt. Murley for the manner in which he safely beached the ship, while they also have a good word for the crew, who remained at their posts all thru the ordeal.

There were twelve passengers on the Sable I, including Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Baldwin of Chicago, Mr. W. E. Baldwin and son, Richard, aged 14 years, of Montreal, the former manager for Canada of the Fidelity Phoenix Assurance Co., of New York, of which Mr. Geo. R. Williams is the local agent; Harry S. Mevartney, of the firm of Oliver and McCartney, Attorneys, of Chicago, who is here on a fishing trip, Edwin Burton, Sergt. Major Arch Goodie who was accompanied by a nurse, Miss C. M. McDonald, a tourist, V. T. Bateman, Miss

Opening and Dedication Corpus Christi Church

The opening and solemn dedication of the new Church of Corpus Christi at Waterford Bridge, Kilbride Parish, will take place on Sunday next, August 19th, at 11 a.m.

The new Church has now been completed. During the past week the new Altars—two of which, the main Altar, and the Sacred Heart, kindly presented by Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Hanley, while the third Altar, the Blessed Virgin's, generously donated by Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Murphy—were placed in position.

The Church will be dedicated by His Grace, the Archbishop, who will be assisted by Rt. Rev. Mgr. MacDermott; Rev. J. J. Rawlins, the Pastor, and the City Clergy of St. Patrick's and Cathedral Parishes. The ceremony will consist of the laying of the Corner Stone, the blessing of the Bell—the gift of Hon. F. McNamara—and the blessing and dedication of the Church. It was in the year 1864 that the Corner Stone of the old Church was laid by Dr. Mullock. That Church was destroyed by fire in the year of the Great Fire of 1892. During all the years the people of the parish, assisted by their kind friends outside, have been energetically working to gather funds whereby they would be able to erect another home to the Living God. The ambition of years has now been fulfilled. To this dedication ceremony on Sunday they extend a very hearty invitation to one and all of the friends and supporters of the parish. At the conclusion of the Solemn High Mass the sermon for the occasion will be preached by Rt. Rev. Mgr. Dermott. The Cathedral Choir under the leadership of Mr. Hutton will be present, while the C. C. C. Band will also be in attendance.

Mildred Ball, Mrs. A. J. Dove, and Miss J. E. Dove.

The Sable is in a very exposed position and the chances of her being refloated are not bright. The s.s. Yankton, due to-day, called at Lamaline yesterday, where she landed pumps and other gear, while the Stella Maris and the American are also enroute with divers, pumps, etc., and as soon as they reach the scene operations will start immediately. The Yankton is bringing along a quantity of fruit and other perishable goods that was included in the Sable I's cargo.

Mr. C. F. Taylor is leaving by the Rosalind to-morrow for New York.

Mr. E. R. Bowring, Jr., leaves by the Rosalind to-morrow, for Halifax.

Mr. Slater Ellis and his sister, Miss Mary Ellis, are leaving for New York by the Rosalind to-morrow.

Mr. Caleb Clarke, brother of Mrs. Andrew Goodie of this city, who left Brigus 35 years ago, arrived by the s.s. Rosalind yesterday morning on a visit to the old Homestead.

Captain Erie Chafe who was on a business trip to the West Coast returned by last night's train. Captain Chafe was at Lamaline when the Sable I. went ashore and the passengers are loud in their praise of the manner in which he assisted in making them feel at home.

Mr. William J. Murphy, brother of Mr. T. Murphy, builder, Cross Roads, leaves for his home at Boston by the s.s. Rosalind. Mr. Murphy was on a visit to his brother, and while here enjoyed the company of his old friends. Thirty-five years ago he left Blackhead, St. John's for the States, where he became an electrician. He has paid a few visits to St. John's since he first left it.

S. S. Sable I. Will Probably Be Refloated To-morrow

The s.s. Stella Maris is at the wreck of the Sable I installing wrecking pumps. If weather conditions are favorable the Stella Maris expects to tow the ship off to-morrow. The present plan is to tow the Sable I to Halifax for repairs. The pumps now being installed will keep the ship in seaworthy condition. It may be that some temporary repairs will have to be made, in which event the ship will be taken to Burin or Lamaline. Practical seamen are of opinion that the Sable I's damages are not very serious and they back their conclusions from the fact that such ship was able to steam 45 miles and be kept afloat with the aid of her own pumps before being beached. The work of repairing the ship if she can be successfully towed to Halifax will be rushed and we hope to see this popular boat on her old route in the course of a few weeks.

Young Lady Finds Boarding Expensive And Quits Country.

A young lady who arrived here early in July to spend a vacation, apparently did not receive the welcome home she anticipated. The first few days were spent with her mother, but family affairs caused her to move to the residence of her brother-in-law. This happened about five weeks ago. In the interim the 'visitor' spent two weeks around the bay. When she came to change boarding houses on last Saturday she was presented with a board bill which she refused to pay, and her brother-in-law held her trunks. The Judge, while sympathizing with the visitor, had to enforce the cold maximum of the law, which says "Nothing for nothing," but he cut the bill in two, as there had been no specific arrangement of terms of board. He also made an order for the delivery of the trunks. The young lady is leaving by the Rosalind to-morrow and says 'I will be late when she comes again to spend and 'old home' month with her mother's people. This can only happen if she is provided with a wad large enough to provide a suite de luxe at the Ritz-Carlton.

Fishery Reports

Brigus to Bay Roberts Point—Codfish prospects poor.

Cape Race to St. Shotts—Codfish prospects fairly good. There are 15 schooners on the fishing grounds; fish fairly plentiful for trawls and jiggers. Some traps got good hauls last week.

Change Island—Fishery prospects not very encouraging. There has been a little improvement during the week in traps but fishermen have not been able to work traps owing to adverse weather.

The traps around Trinity have all been taken in and the fishery practically abandoned.

From Channel to Port aux Basques—There has been no improvement in the fishery for the week ending August 11th.

Reports from Winterton, T.B., indicate there is a marked improvement in fishery there during the last few days. What is needed is good weather to enable people to get on the grounds. Trawls are doing good, securing 1 to 4 quintals each.

HERE, THERE, AND EVERYWHERE

Back in the old days when William Hohenzollern, now living quietly in Holland, used to enjoy travelling about Europe as the German emperor, the steamer Bremen often saw him installed in the imperial suite, built gaudily for his personal use. And at that time it was related, though never proved, that a sumptuous royal coffin was always carried on this vessel, in case of eventualities.

It now appears this story was true. The Bremen is to-day the Constantinople, running between Sandy Hook and the Golden Horn. Down in her hold there was found recently the coffin referred to. It is a pretentious affair, lined with silk and decorated with gold and silver. William last travelled on the Constantinople in 1912.

Argentina abolished the death penalty from the penal code about a year ago, and since then there has been a noticeable increase in crimes of violence in this city. The question of restoring the death penalty has arisen, and a bill to this end has been introduced in Congress.

Large numbers of emigrants from Europe, many of them belonging to the criminal classes, have come to Argentina recently, and the present crime wave is attributed to this undesirable element.

A Fascist party, after the model of the Italian Fascist, has been organized in Roumania. Its motto is "Justice to the just, death to the evil; Fascismo never forgets."

In its program the new party declares that Roumania needs, first of all, a dictatorship for the restoration of order, security, and honest dealing. It calls also for the expulsion of foreigners, whose presence to the extent of 2,000,000 persons gravely complicates the housing problem.

Women to succeed in business must learn to dress comfortably without losing the charm of their sex, and to take correction from the boss without weeping, according to Mrs. Alice Foote MacDougall, New York business woman.

Mrs. MacDougall, who predicted recently that within a century women will be "doing all the business," said that the observance of a few simple rules would hasten the time when they would take over such control. Other suggestions were:

"Stick to agreements without squirming if you are getting the worst of it."

"Say 'no' at the right time."

British Income Tax Relief

(Editor Evening Advocate)

The new Finance Act contains a section of interest to certain residents abroad, viz; public servants. In such cases it is now provided that, when liability as a resident arises, emoluments, pensions and annuities payable in Great Britain or Northern Ireland shall be chargeable to tax which will be deducted by the paying authority.

So far as payment of Tax is concerned, it is now possible to claim for three years ended 5th April, 1923, and it is apparent that many persons have yet to discover that they are entitled to claim under one or more of the following classes of relief:

1—Exemption in respect of dividends on certain British Government Securities where the beneficial owner is ordinarily resident abroad.

2—Exemption in respect of interest or dividends on foreign or Colonial Securities, stocks, &c., owned by a person not resident in the United Kingdom.

Reduction or exemption from tax on Income from sources within the United Kingdom, in the case of British subject, Crown servant, widow of Crown servant, servant of British Protectorate, employee of missionary society, resident in the Isle of Man or Channel Isles, or resident abroad for sake of own health or health of member of the family.

4—Reduction of tax where Income Tax has also been paid on the same Income in another part of the Empire.
